Since my last newsletter, one of my Brothers suddenly passed away. He lived in Nevada, had a wife and four adult kids. My three brothers and I have always been close and this hit us pretty hard. There are some lessons to be learned. My brother talked to me for two years about getting his estate planning done. He never started. Now it's urgent for his wife.

In another situation, a long time friend of mine is recovering after 16 days on life support in ICU. We also talked a year ago about his planning but he never got started. I suspect now he is motivated.

Please don't misunderstand. I don't share these two stories to profit from someone else's tragedy but to learn from them. We never know what lies ahead.

Something Fun

George Bernard Shaw:

When Shaw died, he made sure his legacy will live on forever. He left money behind to fund a brand new alphabet which he wanted to be called the "Shaw Alphabet." His conditions? The alphabet must have at least 40 letters, be phonetic, and be distinctly different from the Latin alphabet. His alphabet was realized in 1950.

John B. Kelly, Sr.:

John B. Kelly, father of Grace Kelly, used his will to tell his daughter one last time to curb her spending habits. Daddy Kelly asked Grace to "not bankrupt the Principality of Monaco with the bills about her clothing.

"William Shakespeare: William Shakespeare probably has one of the most romantic minds that ever existed. So we wonder what happened to the romance between him and his wife... Shakespeare left his wife his "second-best bed." Who got the first-best bed, Billy?
